Hollywood-Bound — and All for a Dollar

Among the things that a newspaper receives through the mail, considers cynically, and turns down cold, is the following advertising copy with a Hollywood address: "Hollywood needs children with talent! Has your child: (1) A screen personality, (2) a recording voice, (3) Acting ability, (4) Ability to take direction, (5) Poise?"

German Planes Patrol Oil Fields, Rumania

Axis' Attention Now to Be Centered on Greece and Turkey

BUCHAREST — (AP) — Tightly packed formation totalling about 150 planes, some bearing German markings and others the Rumanian insignia, flew back and forth over Bucharest and the oil towns of Ploesti and Giurgiu Friday.

They swooped low over the British legation in Bucharest where the staff is speeding its packing up.

They patrolled East, West, North and South methodically and at one time 3 planes were over the capital.

Greco-Turkey Next Step

BUDAPEST — (AP) — Anti-Rumanian demonstration by students in Hungary and the German military penetration of Rumania aroused Balkan fears Friday that all of southeast Europe before long may be drawn into the extended axis war front.

A "strongly organized" axis diplomatic campaign to draw Greece and Turkey away from Britain and to secure the loyalty of other south-eastern European countries is awaited by observers as the next logical step.

If this campaign fails, Balkan observers predicted, military action hardly can be avoided.

Rumanian Credits Blocked

LONDON — (AP) — The British government blocked all Rumanian credits to this country it was learned Friday.

It is not known whether Rumanian ships in British ports were included in the seizure order which was presumably made because of German troops entering Rumania and because of arrests and alleged mistreatment of Britons there.

How Defense Racket Works

Government Contracts Bring Out Racketeers

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — "S' funny thing how the big government contracts bring out the racketeers."

"This is a true story, but don't ask me names or places, because it's off the record and I can go only so far."

Three men—two from Boston, one from Providence, R. I.—are securing the land, knocking on the doors of those manufacturers who might get government contracts. These men have made no mistake about it, either.

They checked up in advance on needs and possible supplies. They have found what way the contract wind is blowing. Here is a sample of how they work:

"How do you do, Mr. X. It's a pleasure. It really is a marvelous plant you have here. Why, you could produce things you never dreamed of, Mr. X. Did you ever think of getting a government contract?"

"Well, here's how it is, Mr. X. . . . In Washington, we exercise a great deal of influence. We have connections."

"Would you like to see our present?"

Ha-Ha! Of course they aren't!

Young Boy Smothers in Cotton Room

Bobby Taylor, of Near Hope, Suffocates Late Thursday

Bobby Taylor, 12, son of W. C. Taylor, smothered to death in a cotton-filled room about 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon at his home three miles west of Hope.

Dr. J. H. Weaver, Hempstead coroner, who viewed the body said that young Taylor had dug a hole to the floor and while playing fell into the hole head first. He was unable to free himself and died from suffocation.

Funeral services will be held at Salem, in Pike county near Kirby, at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon with the Rev. N. L. Martin of Bodeav officiating. Burial will be in the Salem cemetery.

He is survived by his father, five brothers and three sisters.

Aid Asked in Garbage Care

City Physician Calls Attention to City Laws

To all food handlers, cafes, eating places and etc., in the city of Hope: I hereby invite your attention to the following sections relative to the care of garbage in our city.

"Section 12. Garbage, Liquid Wastes and Rubbish: Garbage shall be kept in tight metal containers provided with close-fitting metal covers, properly adjusted at all times or otherwise protected from flies, other insects and animals, and the contents must be removed as often as necessary to prevent decomposition and overflow and be disposed of in a sanitary manner. The use of wooden containers for garbage is prohibited either in the kitchen or on the premises. No liquid waste, including dish water, shall be discharged on or near the premises so as to create a nuisance. Separate containers must be provided for cans, bottles and similar rubbish."

Section 22. Premises: The premises connected with or used by public eating and drinking places must be kept free from accumulations which favor fly or mosquito breeding or the harboring of vermin.

I think Hope is the best place in the world to live and if I don't think so I would leave. It is a clean town except for a few instances. I refer to the uptown where the principal eating places and grocery stores are located.

The above sections tell exactly what to do with garbage and also states that your premises must be kept clean. This refers particularly to back yards. I don't think it would be good for business if some of your customers could see these back yards.

My advice to everyone is to clean up and keep clean both front and back of your premises. To differ from these sections is against the law and I urge that everyone pay attention.

Match Lipstick and Nails Says Polish Salesmen

By BETTY CLARKE

AP Feature Service Writer

"Match your lipstick and your nails" is the song of the nail polish salesmen.

But career girls and housewives go right on wearing fairly bright lipstick and fairly light nail polish.

It's the stars of stage and screen who match bright hues of nail polish and lipstick. Even they subdue oil or paste and dry each finger separately before putting on new polish. Last and very important is to massage hands with lotion or cream.

Far-Off New Zealand Feels War Load as Aid to Great Britain Keeps Dominion's Taxes High

Both Business and Little Man Find Cost Heavy

By PETER EDSON

Editor, NEA Service

AUCKLAND, N. Z. — War in Europe may be 10,000 miles from Australasia, but it is so close to home that it has touched the life of every inhabitant. Take the case of the average New Zealander.

Sacrifices demanded of the civilian population don't involve the direct attack now being experienced "at home" in England. But before it is all over, if events follow the course of the last war, almost every family will be bereaved in some degree.

With a population of a million and a half, New Zealand has already sent 23,000 men overseas to fight beside the British, and she has four times that many in training at home. Furthermore, she prides herself on her air force, with 400 pilots overseas and a program of training 1400 pilots and 1400 observers every year, for the duration.

Operating under a labor government and a new deal that bans anything ever conjured up in Washington, New Zealand has piled on taxation until it comes close to the rates of England.

Nash Ups The Taxes

Brains of this new deal is the Hon. Walter Nash, minister of finance, who has persuaded corporations and individuals to loan the government about $26,000,000 without interest for three years, which Mr. Nash figures is the minimum duration of the war.

As if this weren't enough, Mr. Nash has put through an excess profits tax of 60 per cent.

Taxation for the little man, heavy before the war started, owing to the socialistic policy of the government, has been upped, too. Ten per cent of the earnings of everyone are deducted as social security taxes for free hospitals, unemployment and old-age benefits. On top of that, there is an income tax on everything over the equivalent of $25, and a 10 per cent sales tax on most classes of goods. This is war.

Gasoline, amusements, tobacco and liquor are taxed almost 50 per cent. Gas is now 50 cents a gallon.

This alone would have brought about a reduction in consumption, as it's like pouring gold into the tank, but in addition there is a drastic rationing of gas which keeps the mileage of the private motorist within narrow limits.

Gasoline Rationed

At the start of the war, a complete ban on sale of gas was imposed. Cars disappeared from the streets as if by magic, causing an astonishing transformation in the daily street scene. This was a panic measure, however, and after a few days was relaxed to permit the consumption of eight gallons a month in the case of smaller cars, and 12 gallons for larger cars.

Obviously this allowed very little use of automobiles, so during the summer holidays, when the Centennial Exhibition was in progress at Wellington, all restrictions were waived. In the autumn they were re-applied and have not since been lifted.

Each motorist has a sheet of coupons colored according to the horsepower of his car. If, for example, his car happens to be a 12 h. p. machine of a very popular medium-sized English make, he has a sheet of yellow coupons, each of which is numbered, and entitles him to three gallons. At present, the pleasure car owner is allowed to use three of these a month.

When the coupons are all gone, the car stays in the garage until the beginning of the next month. The greatest act of generosity in New Zealand today is to give someone a "petrol ration."

Bobcats Off to Jonesboro

5 Regulars Left Behind Nursing Injuries

Approximately 25 members of the Hope High School football squad and student managers boarded a large bus here early Friday morning for Jonesboro where the Bobcats take on a strong Hurricane team in their second conference game of the season.

Five regular starters, Rowe, Thompson, Bradshaw, Simms and Oliver, were left behind because of injuries. Captain Breeding, guard, and Slade end, have been pulled out of the line and will take over their suffering teammates' duties in the back-field.

Jonesboro has one of the strongest teams in school history and will have a many point edge advantage.

The junior team overpowered the Magnolia Juniors here Thursday afternoon by a score of 14-0. The locals scored in the second and third quarters. Taylor, Hope end, brought the fans to their feet with a 70 yard run after receiving a pass from S. Bell. Taylor and Bell were outstanding for the Hope lads.

Unmasked Bandit Holds Up Tol-E-Tex Station

Officers reported no trace Friday of the lone unmasked bandit who help up and robbed the Tol-E-Tex service station, just outside the Hope city limits, early Thursday morning and made way with $77 in cash and currency.

The robber forced Ralph Hunt, station attendant, to the back of the station where his gun accidentally went off while trying Hunt to a post.

The man was about 5 feet 7 inches tall and was wearing a light hat and jacket. He left the station walking.

12 Proposed Laws Confront Voters at November Polls

State Senator Pilkinton Reviews Them at Rotary

Twelve proposed amendments or acts will confront Arkansas' general election voters on one of the longest ballots in history, State Senator James H. Pilkinton told Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Senator Pilkinton and Municipal Judge W. K. Lemley were club guests, being introduced by E. F. McFaddin.

Senator Pilkinton pointed out that the November measures include three constitutional amendments referred to the people by the legislature; four amendments initiated by the people; three acts referred to the people by the legislature; and two acts initiated by the people.

The speaker outlined the 12 measures as follows:

REFERRED AMENDMENT NO. 30.—To repeal certain provisions of No. 29, that is, to repeal the double-primary law and to permit appointees to elective office to stand for election.

REFERRED AMENDMENT NO. 31.—The highway debt refunding measure.

REFERRED AMENDMENT NO. 32.—To exempt personal property from ad valorem taxation—up to $50 for a single person, up to $100 for a married one.

INITIATED AMENDMENT NO. 33.—Would permit cities of 5,000 or more population to vote to levy up to 1 mill tax for public library purposes.

INITIATED AMENDMENT NO. 34.—To authorize cities to vote a tax of not more than 2 mills to pay police and fire pensions, up to 1 mill for each group.

INITIATED AMENDMENT NO. 35.—To reorganize the State Game & Fish Commission, Incoming Governor Homer Adkins has expressed opposition to this measure, Senator Pilkinton pointed out.

INITIATED AMENDMENT NO. 36.—This is the Rotenberg measure, the speaker explained. It would seize much of the special tax revenue now going to the public schools and divert it to old-age pensions. Opponents charge that the Rotenberg measure would wreck the public schools, and, furthermore, the amendment proposes to name the men who will administer the state pension department.

REFERRED ACT NO. 4.—Another of the highway bond refunding measures.

REFERRED ACT NO. 314.—To require that all personal injury suits be tried either in the county in which the accident occurred or in which the plaintiff lives. This is known as the change-of-venue bill.

REFERRED ACT NO. 319.—A workmen's compensation act providing for a private insurance system.

REFERRED ACT NO. 1.—A workmen's compensation act providing for a state fund.

INITIATED ACT NO. 2.—To change the law regarding liquor elections.

Germans Admit Vital Damage At Hamburg

British Ships Damage German Bases at Cherbourg and Kiel

LONDON — (AP) — Light and heavy forces of the British fleet blasted German-held Cherbourg into flames during Thursday night, it was officially reported, while the far-ranging RAF slashed anew at warships in the German naval base of Wilhelmshaven and the great Krupp shipyards at Kiel.

The conflagrations which were started at Cherbourg, on the German held "invasion coast" of France, by cannonading warships, cooperating with bombing planes could be seen for 40 miles, the admiralty reported.

The assault on Cherbourg was unchallenged the admiralty said.

Commenting on the apparent German unwillingness to send ships out to fight the admiralty said, "It was known that the enemy has light forces at Cherbourg."

The fleet suffered no damage or casualties in any way, the communiqué said.

Berlin Admit Damage

BERLIN — (AP) — Reports of a British cruiser's attempt to shell German-held Cherbourg, and of RAF devastation in Hamburg and Amsterdam, and of a British air stab into central Germany injected new flavor Friday in the running account of the war.

DNB acknowledged considerable damage to the north German port of Hamburg during the night, saying that a British bomb devastation spread over the densely populated sector for more than five miles of a mile radius while another area was characterized as "a shambles of ashes."

Hamburg's casualties listed three dead, 15 seriously injured and many more slightly injured.

Eighteen were killed and 20 wounded in the early morning raid on German-occupied Amsterdam.

Attack Beaten Off

LONDON — (AP) — The capital's defenders ground and aloft were reported to have hurled back four separate German air thrusts Friday and to have turned the fifth into a great twisting shy battle over the southeast coast.

The fifth alarm of the day came at tea time when German planes swept over Kent, dodging in and out of cloudbanks to escape the withering fire of coastal and anti-aircraft batteries.

Suddenly a large force of RAF fighters appeared and the drone and screams of planes in combat in the fleecy clouds could be heard. One raider was reported shot down.

War May Bring New Way Living

British Architects Advocate Windowless Houses

By PAUL MANNING

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON — For the last 20 years the American way of living has been a development of spacious windows, daylight in the home, wide lawns, big individual gardens and sun baths.

But if this war continues for two or three years longer and if the new housing plans now on exhibition at the Royal Institute of British Architects are accepted by the British government, that whole scheme of intelligent housing may go by the boards.

For Britain's architects have been busy during the last months of civilian bombing devising houses that are virtually windowless and practically bombproof. So the idea catches hold in England and the effect sweeps to America, the U. S. family settling down to a new community housing development may well find themselves sleeping in bombproof bedrooms in windowless houses located in invisible towns.

The ideal wartime single house, British architects find, is a one-story concrete and brick affair with narrow slits resembling windows located just below the roof. Outside, the walls and roof would be covered with a zig-zag rustee wash which would blend with the surrounding houses and count.

Your Nerves

Learn to Relax for Health's Sake; Speed Your Way Out Body, Mind, Spirit

This is one of a series of special articles revealing typical cases of nervous and mental disorders and their treatment through thought control as carried out by the author and his associates at the Boston Dispensary, famous charitable health clinic.

By WINFRED BIRDADES

If you are going to derive lasting benefit from this series of articles you must learn the art of voluntary relaxation—physical, mental, and emotional.

During the last 150 years man has new ideas, more new inventions, more acceleration of the pace of life, more changes in the conditions of life, than during hundreds of years before, and perhaps thousands. The complexities of life—home life, school life, social life, business life, economic, political, and international life—has developed faster than man's nervous strength. The agitated emotions cry out for a bit of calm, the strained body cries for some new vigor, the starved soul for some kind of real sustenance.

Speed at work, at play, speed in thinking and feeling, speed even in sleep—incessant speed lays waste the body's powers and keeps it from storing up reserves. The nervous system needs periods of relaxation, the digestive system needs them, the entire physical organism needs them—the mind, the emotions, the spirit—the whole man needs them.

You can learn to relax. You must learn to relax. You can make your body just as responsive to the idea of relaxation as it is to the idea of dynamic exertion. If you tell your feet to press down on the floor they do so. If you tell them to rest lightly on the floor they do that. You can teach your entire body to be equally responsive to the power of thought, and to be immediately so.

Lie down upon your back on a hard couch or on the floor, or if that is not possible, sit comfortably in a chair. Then close your eyes; the mere closing of the eyes suggests relaxation and rest and peace, while it blocks out distracting sights and helps to prevent distracting thoughts. Breathe deeply and quietly; slow, full, deep breaths that reach all portions of your lungs. That also helps to relax the body and to induce the mood of peace.

Then, beginning with your toes and continuing up to your face, pick out each set of muscles in succession and tell them to relax. Concentrate your mind upon each set of muscles until you feel the tenseness go and limpness take its place.

When you have thus taken each set of muscles separately in that fashion talk to your whole body. Say: "Let go—relax—rest!" Say it several times, not vocally but mentally. Then say: "I am heavy; my legs are heavy—my trunk is heavy—my arms are heavy—my head is heavy. My whole body is heavy. Oh! how heavy I am."

After that say: "Relaxation and peace—quietness and confidence—power through repose."

Say the words mentally, and say them slowly. Then consciously open your whole being to the life and vitality that enfold you continually, and draw them in. Take at least 10 minutes for this twice a day, and defense program has ever hit this country. It is not a thing to be meddled with. It is the clear duty of the government to guarantee that defense building goes on, without delay, free of profiteering, free of politics.

Congress Will Be Asked to Restore Draftees' Rights

WASHINGTON — Passage of the conscription act has tossed a hefty monkey wrench into the machinery of the Social Security Board, and congress will undoubtedly be called on to extricate same before it finishes its work for the year.

As things stand now, men called up for service stand to lose certain rights, both under the federal old age and survivors' insurance acts and under the unemployment compensation law.

For instance: The amount of unemployment compensation a man is entitled to depends on the amount of insured employment he has had during the preceding year. A man who is in the draft army is not, of course, going to need unemployment insurance while he is in uniform; but when he finishes his year of training he will have spent an entire year in a non-insured job—and hence, for the following year, will be extremely shy on unemployment insurance protection.

In other words, his year of service will simply cancel the protection he has built up.

Average Wage Will Go Down

The draftee's rights under old age and survivors' insurance will be somewhat less drastically affected. He will spend an entire year in a non-covered occupation. Hence, on the Social Security Board's books, his average wage—on which the insurance he or his survivors will ultimately get is to be based—will go down. Thus the amount coming to him or to his survivors will be lower than it would have been if he had stayed out of the army.

It is the unemployment insurance angle which is worrying officials of the Social Security Board most. They expect that when the first year of training ends, a great many draftees will meet some delay in finding jobs. Legally, a drafted worker is entitled to have his old job back; in practice, it is believed this will be rather hard to enforce. The board's experts figure some form of unemployment allowances will be pretty badly needed when the draftees go back to his entering the service; to rule that his rights to all benefits under the social security act would be the same when he came out of the army as they were when he went in. One objection to this is it wouldn't help the man who had accumulated no benefits before he was drafted; another is that the states might thereafter be called on to pay unemployment insurance for a period during which they had collected no payroll taxes.

The solution preferred by Chairman Altmyer of the Social Security Board would call for amending the social security act so as to make army service a "covered" job. The army then would report to the board the wages paid to each man, and would deduct the proper tax from each soldier's pay envelope. One thing Altmyer likes about this is that the man who had not previously been in a covered job could start building up some benefits for himself.

If the act is to be amended, congress will have to do something this fall. Any change in the unemployment insurance title would require action by all the state legislatures. They convene in January; if they are to act, congress must complete its part of the job ahead of time.

YESTERDAY, Hugh shoots the lock on the door as the alarm cracks about them. Rushing up stairs, the men and all doors and windows locked. And the evidence of an intruder. There is a scream from the jungle. When candles are brought, Braitwood sees Adam, leaning oddly against the lioness. Maria Hempfield is at his feet. Near her hand is Adam's gun.

DEATH IN THE JUNGLE

CHAPTER IV

ADAM LANGDON'S hands hung stiffly forward, his feet extended toward the floor like a figure hung on a gibbet. A small red spot stained the bosom of his shirt. The gaping rigidity in his face told the rest. So might some dreadful scarecrow have appeared to a passing farmer on a moonless night in a lingering ray of lantern light.

Langdon's buttoned coat had caught over the lioness' head and the scimitar, fastened to the beast's neck, had penetrated beneath his shoulder, both helping to hold him in crazy erectness. All this Braitwood saw in a glance.

"Is it a double murder?" Craig Gundrum asked.

"Murder! Not that!" Hugh groaned.

THE word had an eerie sound in that dark room. Yet it was no stranger there. The shadowy beasts crowding the darkness had all known violent deaths. The weapons on wall and rack had drunk deep from the wild, free life of jungle and veldt; the ancient blunderbusses and obsolete daggers had been employed to grim purpose more than once.

But the six persons in the room reacted to it in oddly different ways. It sponged the blond vigor from Hugh Langdon's powerful face; Nella had refused to uncover her eyes and face the horror that had been her uncle a few short moments before. At the table, Patricia Langdon had frozen in her seat, apparently unable to utter a sound. Togi trembled perceptibly. Gundrum's eyes were brilliant with excitement. Braitwood was shocked, but calm.

Sidney had dropped to his knees beside Maria. It was only afterwards, when he tried to reconstruct the scene, that he recalled hearing Gundrum whispering to Pat Langdon.

MARTA was alive. Her pulse, however faint, her breathing, told Sidney that. She stirred slightly as he bent over her.

"Marta has only fainted," said Hugh, who had joined them. "I thought at first it might be murder and suicide."

Between them they carried Marta to the window seat. Sidney brought liquor from the table and forced it through her bloodless lips, while Hugh and Togi began a search of the jungle for traces of the murderer. It seemed impossible he could have passed them on the stairway and made his escape through the floor above, but there was no other exit.

Marta stirred. Her eyelids fluttered and then she had caught the lawyer's hand in a desperate grip.

"Adam is dead, Sidney," she whispered. "I felt his face."

"Do you know who killed my husband, Miss Hempfield?" Pat Langdon had crossed to them. All the strength of her young will lay behind the question.

"No, I do not know who killed Adam, Mrs. Langdon," Marta muttered, "but I know he is dead."

"Please do not question Miss Hempfield. She is too weak to talk," Sidney said, sternly. "Marta, you are not to discuss this with anyone."

HE was certain Langdon had not shot himself. No powder burns framed the red spot on his shirt front.

And above all others, Marta had a motive for murder. She had been found lying at Adam's feet, all but grasping the weapon with which he had armed himself. She had admitted she knew he was dead. Alert in her defense, the lawyer realized the need for caution.

"Sorry," Pat turned toward the lioness and its dreadful burden. Sidney followed.

"Nothing must be touched," he cautioned them. "We must wait for the police."

"Do we need to call the police?" Nella questioned plaintively. "Can't you all see how this happened? Uncle Adam was standing on the lioness' back. I don't know why, but he must have been. Like the floor, it's highly waxed and slippery. He slipped forward. His coat caught and jerked him back against the scimitar. It's like a razor. Naturally his gun fell from his hand. There—there it is."

She pointed to the old-fashioned weapon on the floor and burst into a fit of hysterical weeping. "I differ." Instantly Gundrum had lifted the back of Adam's coat. "The scimitar hasn't penetrated deeply," he said with relief. "It could not have caused death. I shouldn't like to believe that my carelessness had been responsible for a tragedy, but there is no doubt about the block being slippery."

"In cases of violent death, no matter what the cause, the police must be summoned, Nella," Sidney said gently.

"HOW extraordinary to have them in on one's first house party after marriage," Pat breathed. "Nella, you had better go up to your room and lie down." She was calm, apparently emotionless. How can she be so cold, Sidney thought, with Adam. . .

"It's my unpardonable duty to insist that we all remain together until the police come," he said, again the formal attorney. "You understand that we shall all be searched for the weapon that killed Adam."

"Weapon?" Nella sobbed stubbornly.

"Adam was shot," Sidney said. "There is a bullet hole in his shirt front, Nella. The rest of us noticed it."

"The police will not have far to look. Miss Hempfield all but had the gun in her hand," Pat put in quickly.

"A ballistic expert will have to determine whether or not a bullet from that gun killed Adam, Mrs. Langdon," Sidney reminded her. "We don't know yet who handled it."

"You knelt beside Miss Hempfield, Mr. Braitwood. Could you, by any chance, have wiped off her fingerprints?"

"Not by the remotest chance," Sidney replied, evenly.

"I come in with Mr. Braitwood. He no do," Togi interrupted excitedly. "Mr. Hugh, he no wipe off, I see both."

"Let's get upstairs into the light," Hugh suggested. "The thieves, if any, will have left the house long ago after all this commotion. I need a drink."

Led by Hugh, and with Sidney supporting Marta, they walked from the room of death.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Real Humanity of Jesus Appreciated in Glimpses of His Early Childhood
Text: Luke 2:40-52

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

It is in the mature life of Jesus, in His teaching, in His earthly ministry, in His death and resurrection, that we see revealed the fullness of the Gospel.

But that Gospel would be incomplete were it not for its setting in His earthly life, and we are able to appreciate the real humanity of Jesus as we have glimpses of His babyhood and childhood.

The strong emphasis upon the divinity of Jesus has sometimes obscured the fact that that divinity was revealed in humanity. We could not have had a real incarnation if the earthly life of Jesus had not been in harmony with the laws of birth, life, and growth from the cradle to the grave.

Here in the opening verse of our lesson, we have this emphasized. Luke is writing of Jesus as a boy of 12.

Let Witches Be Life of Party Halloween Season Howls for a Ghostly Affair

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE AP Feature Service Writer

The Halloween season literally howls for a ghostly party. The traditional touch of witchery in foods and decorations always adds to the fun. Make your house—or at least, the dining room—look as spooky as possible, with grinning jack-o'-lanterns, scarecrows and witches.

Fig Leaf Sandwiches

A little silliness is good for relaxing in these days of tension. Here are some ideas for a spooky party:

Halloween togs on fig leaf sandwiches add a gay note to an informal party. Sandwiches can be made up in advance and they tie in perfectly with hot or cold diet, fruit punch, coffee or salads.

To make the loaf: Mix 3 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2-3 teaspoons soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped figs, 1/4 cup dark brown sugar, an egg, 1/4 cups sour milk, and 2 tablespoons fat. Bake in a greased or waxed paper lined pan in a moderately slow oven—about 325 degrees—for an hour. Cool, cut into slices and spread with yellow cheese and soft butter. Arrange sandwich fashion and cut into circles. Make Halloween designs on each sandwich with strips of figs stuck in with butter.

Taffy Apples

Taffy apples go hand in hand with Halloween. Select firm, red eating apples. Discard the stems and stick wooden skewers through for handles. Roll in a deep pan 3 cups dark brown sugar and 1/2 cup water until a fine thread forms when poured from a lemon juice and quickly dip each apple until coated. Dry on waxed paper.

Halloween Puffs

Halloween puffs are new and can be made in a short time. Beat 2 eggs for 2 minutes, add 1 teaspoon each of vanilla and salt, 1/4 cup granulated sugar, 1/4 teaspoon each of grated orange rind and cinnamon, 3 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup milk and a tablespoon of melted fat. Mix the dough and then drop portions from a spoon into deep, hot fat. Fry like doughnuts. Sprinkle with shredded coconut, ground nuts or spiced brown sugar and pile in a scooped out pumpkin.

Witch's Brew

If you want Witch's Brew: Mix together 3 cups prune juice, 2 cups each of orange and pineapple juice, 1 cup grapefruit juice and 1/4 cup lemon juice. Chill and serve in a cauldron with a glass dish in a black kettle. If you choose, top the brew with balls of orange or lime sherbet.

Most of the American birds known as hawks do not kill poultry or small birds.

NIGHT COUGHS

When children coughing at night is caused by throat "tickles" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold, can often be prevented by rubbing the throat and chest with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime.

Vicks VapoRub's swift poultice-and-action action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation, clears air passages, tends to stop mouth breathing, and invigorates the throat.

Try it.

STREETS OF CONCRETE ARE BEST

...safety, beauty, long life, low cost!

Safe, long-lasting streets of concrete mean more than better driving conditions. Concrete costs less than any other pavement of comparable durability and carrying capacity. It cuts upkeep; it increases property values; it reduces driving cost by saving on gas, tires and car repairs.

passports. Mr. X. They are just... what you might call "cailing cards."

Here is a bona fide membership card in the Blank-Blank club. Of course you know what that means, Mr. X.

Then here's my card to the Capitol Writers' club... And the Association of White House Punks... And the Congress Green Room... The men finally explain what they are up to. How would you, with your fine factory, like a contract for defense materials? We can fix it. And it won't cost you a penny more than 2 per cent of your gross contract!

Nine times out of ten, the factory owner will say: "All right, Pal. But there's nothing dishonest about it, is there?"

"Dishonest? Why, my dear fellow, you don't think we would be doing anything like that, surely?"

Why, we are simply brokers' and surely you know that there are brokers in every business. Do you know of any business that pays less than 2 per cent for getting their contracts? Certainly not! What do you pay your own salesmen? Ten per cent? Fifteen per cent? Well, there you are.

And so the men go out of the factory with a contract.

And what happens? The manufacturers, within a few days or few weeks, get an order from Washington to produce ten thousand pans of woven socks, a million leggings, 40,000 radio dials, or 500 tanks. And the manufacturer may pay his 2 per cent and figure himself well off.

This racket, which is being worked all over the United States today, is nothing more than a variation on an ancient game.

The defense commission isn't paying commissions to anybody. No manufacturer has to pay one penny for Washington influence, because if there were any such thing and the F. B. I. found out about it, somebody would be in the hoosegow right away.

But these defense grafters check up on factories which might possibly get government contracts, beat the government man to the door and sell NOTHING for 2 per cent of the gross contract.

Over at the defense commission, they are gnashing their teeth. The F. B. I. is just as mad.

If you know of an example of this shell game, notify your local police or the F. B. I.

try-side.

Inside, the houses would be little more than sleeping dormitories, what with double bunks, sliding shutters for the blackout and small high windows covered with wire mesh to prevent flying splinters.

Object: To Get Sleep

"The thought of living in windowless houses may shock many people," a member of the institute said, "but I think it is an idea we shall have to get used to. There is no doubt that the blasting in of windows causes a great deal of damage which could be avoided."

The object of these precautions, of course, is to get sleep. These houses would be built with reinforced concrete slabs top and bottom with 12 1/2 inch thick brick and steel walls. People could sleep right through an air raid with comparative safety because each house would be a small fortress, immune to every explosive except the direct hit of a very big bomb.

Designers Try for New Things

Lanz of Salzburg Sticks to Hearts and Flowers

By AMY PORTER AP Fashion Writer

Clothes designers generally strive for new and different themes each year. But Lanz of Salzburg sticks to the theme that has won him success for more than a decade.

His theme is "Hearts and Flowers"—red and green hearts mostly and pretty little Tyrolean flowers.

He sticks to his favorite silhouette, too, regardless of trends. It's the dirdnd-light-bodied, full-skirted. The gay and youthful silhouette is that of the peasant girls in the Tyrolean Alps, Josef Lanz's homeland.

His new collection, celebrating his third year in America, is bigger and more ambitious than those of past years, appealing to a large audience than the college-ages who've been Lanz fans.

It includes formal evening dresses and coats, as well as the familiar Lanz ski outfits, day dresses and house coats. There are mother and daughter checked taffeta dresses, with laced velvet bodices, identical white wool skating costumes, with embroidered flower borders.

Low square necklines predominate, but there's one notable hostess gown of white flannel cut like an old-fashioned nightgown, with modest high neck and long sleeves.

The ski suits are typically Lanz, the kind that gave him his first recognition. They have snug long jackets with zip-up fronts, down-hill pants, and lots of good bright color.

Lanz uses hand embroidery in a lavish way, scotching the notion that fine handwork can come only from Europe.

no longer be built along the lines of the Packer and Queens developments in New York. There would be accommodations for 1500-1700 workers; but each building would be long, narrow and one story high. In peace-time, because of the concrete floor and ceiling, a second story could be added.

Community Gardens

Bachelor men and women living in this housing project just adjacent to a large factory would be housed in separate buildings which would each be divided into three units; kitchen, lounge and living room for one, bedroom and washroom for the second and third.

Sixty men could live in reasonable comfort, while 42 women would have ample room in the same space.

A large number of boys and girls from 18 to 20 are always employed in wartime munition factories, so they would be provided with the same setup as the adults with the exception that one small, lightless recreation room would be constructed.

Married couples with children would be given the individual one-story cottages having the additional space of a living room.

In both the individual and mass housing units, no individual back yard gardens would be permitted.

Every man would grow vegetables in large community tracts of 15 1/2 acres so as to preserve the communal flag effect of the whole communal layout.

Restriet Imports of Movies

Except that there is an increasing scarcity of many articles in the hope due in part to the government's pre-war policy of import control and that a number of islands and coastal resorts have been placed "out of bounds" on account of defense requirements, the private citizen are not irksome.

It is difficult to get money out of the country. Paying subscriptions to American magazines has become a problem, and in any case the process takes time. Even a person who had a bank account in San Francisco would not now be allowed to operate on it.

There are no bans on newsreels, but new feature picture importations are restricted. The New Zealanders are getting a chance to see reruns of pictures they missed two and three years ago.

Well, the world series is over, but the boys over there are still using the hit-and-run, and getting as many bases as possible.

Harrison in Hollywood

All-Seeing Camera Will Produce Unusual Effects in Arson Welles' 'Citizen Kane'

HOLLYWOOD — An all-seeing camera is working for Orson Welles in the filming of "Citizen Kane." Nearly every shot is a special problem for Greg Toland, the boss cinematographer, and some of them are likely to look downright spooky.

Most Hollywood sets have only two or three walls and no ceiling. Most of Welles' sets have a ceiling and four walls. The camera comes in a door, or maybe a window, and moves about the room on a 20-foot boom, or crane.

In one scene, for instance, the camera projects clear through the dining room of a house and into the living room. The lens picks up a boy playing in the snow outside, then it turns to pick up three actors inside.

When the people move from one room to another, the camera follows them all the way. All this requires smooth work to keep furniture and people out of the way of the camera boom.

Plenty of Mishaps

Welles likes long, smooth scenes interrupted by the closeups and angle shots of accepted movie technique. He'll rehearse his players and crew for hours before using a foot of film, and a visitor gets the idea that production is going very slowly.

Truth is it's progressing rapidly. Lots of things can go wrong, of course. I watched a long series of mishaps on the scene previously described. Between each take there'd be a long wait while workmen smoothed the snow in the yard outside and prepared to pour your huge bags of fresh flakes (corn flakes into the wind machines. Finally everything seemed to be moving smoothly. Welles, on the sidelines, was going through a prayerful pantomime. The complicated scene was almost completed—and one of the actors garbled a word in his dialog.

"Cut!" moaned the young director-producer-author-star. "We got the lights right, the props right, the sound right, the action right—and now this frog gets a man in his throat!"

"Citizen Kane" is the story of a man told in five versions—through the views and experiences of people who knew him. The introduction of one of these chapters, Welles explains, is a page from a diary. Individually, as the eye would see them, the words appear, and one of these is "boy."

Not Effect Smooth

Immediately the letters dissolve into a rebus-like picture of the boy himself, a small figure on the white margin of the page. The picture becomes larger; the white background is seen as a snowbank, with the kid playing there. The camera has been watching him through an open window. His mother had raised the window to call to him; now she closes it as the camera dashes back to show her, the living room and the two men.

All this sounds pretty tricky, and it is. But the effect, seen on the screen, is amazingly smooth. I don't know whether "Citizen Kane" will be an office smash, but I do believe that the Upstart Orson Welles is contributing some important ideas to the conventional movies.
